

Arbor Vitae

Tree of Life

A child questions whether trees have their winter roots in the ground or in the sky and whether there are leaves underfoot unseen filling the veins we mine.

The child is answered that only human roots have their trees in the sky; and if leaves became an acceptable mode of exchange our land would still be bankrupt of wonder.

By Kathleen Moore